FACULTY

Susan DePaoli, MSN, R.N., CCRN, has been a clinical educator for St. Mary’s Medical Center in Blue Springs, Mo., for the past 14 years. Her area of clinical practice has been in intensive care and emergency nursing, and she continues to practice clinically in the emergency department as a relief staff nurse. DePaoli graduated from the Research School of Nursing in Kansas City, Mo., in 1978 with a diploma in nursing. She received her bachelor’s from Webster University in St. Louis in 1994 and earned her master’s in rural and family nursing, education track, graduating from Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg, Mo., in 2003. Her current professional practice encompasses the development and ongoing support of nursing orientation through a staff preceptor training program targeting orientation of experienced nurses, as well as a separate program targeting orientation of new graduate nurses. She has held a critical care registered nurse certification (CCRN) in adult critical care nursing since 1989 and is a national member of the American Association of Critical Care Nurses.

Cheryle M. Kelly, MSN, R.N., has a passion for advocating for nurses to not only succeed but also to love the profession they have chosen. In her clinical background of critical care, she grew from a staff nurse to a house supervisor during her career. In a staff development position, Kelly was instrumental in implementing a “best in practice” graduate nurse internship program, which has more than an 80 percent retention rate for new graduates throughout a two-year period. She has taught in both associate degree and bachelor’s degree nursing programs and serves as an NCLEX review instructor. Kelly has been an adjunct faculty member for the University of Missouri Sinclair School of Nursing since 2001. Her leadership style is to teach, coach, nurture and grow the future of nursing.

Kristine Hart L’Ecuyer, MSN, R.N., CCNS, is an associate professor and coordinator of continuing nursing education at Saint Louis University School of Nursing. Her teaching responsibilities include pathophysiology for master’s students, a critical care elective for senior undergraduate nursing students and supervising senior nursing students completing their comprehensive nursing practicum with hospital preceptors. Working with Saint Louis University Hospital, L’Ecuyer helped develop a nurse preceptor education program. Her clinical background includes critical care nursing of thoracic and cardiothoracic patients, including heart and lung transplant recipients. L’Ecuyer also has written several chapters on health and wellness for nursing textbooks, including “Fundamentals in Nursing and Basic Nursing,” as well as chapters on fluid and electrolytes and cardiovascular assessment.
